JOHN 8: 32

In late summer, we went for a walk in the New Forest in England and had fun picking the blackberries that grew in the wild while watching the horses frolicking nearby. As I enjoyed the bounty of the sweet fruit planted by others perhaps many years before, I thought of Jesus's words to His disciples: "I sent you to reap that whereon ye bestowed no labour: other men laboured, and ye are entered into their labours." (John 4:38).

I love the generosity of God's kingdom reflected in those words. He lets us enjoy the fruits of someone else's labors, such as when we share our love for Jesus with a friend whose family—unbeknown to us—has been praying for her for years. I also love the implied limits of Jesus's words, for we may plant seeds that we will never harvest but someone else may. Therefore, we can rest in the tasks before us, not being hoodwinked into thinking that we are responsible for the outcomes. God's work, after all, doesn't depend on us. He has all of the resources for a bountiful harvest, and we are privileged to play a role in it.

I wonder what fields ready for harvest are before you? Before me? May we heed Jesus's loving instruction: "Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest" (v. 35).

We can reap what others have sown.

MISSIONARY OF THE WEEK

DAVID & STEPHANIE GROSS

Missionaries To Moldova

David was born and raised in Canton, Ohio. Growing up in a Baptist church and Christian home, he heard the Gospel and trusted in Christ as his Savior in 1987. Realizing his call to full-time ministry, he attended Pensacola Christian College to pursue a B.A. in Pastoral Ministries and minor in Missions. He then attended seminary to earn an M.A. in Bible. While in college, he met Stephanie, and they were married on August 7, 2004. He has been involved in leading a VBS, teaching Sunday school, going on visitation, ministering three summers in Moldova, leading congregational singing, and preaching in nursing homes.

Stephanie grew up in Heritage Baptist Church in Memphis, Tennessee. As a child, she trusted in Christ as her Savior and surrendered to missions at age eleven. After graduating from a Christian high school, she attended a Christian college where she received a B.A. in English Education and Teaching Art as a minor. She has ministered through singing in the choir, teaching children's Sunday School, participating in special music, and teaching art during her two trips to Moldova. David and Stephanie now have two children, Abby and Caleb.
